| 1991LR08 | Living Wage      | Does the standard requirepaying wages sufficient tomeet basic needs of theworker and his or her family(living wage)? | Living wage is defined by the wage that can meetthe basic needs to maintain a safe, decent stand-ard of living within the community. Basic needs in-clude housing, nutrition, transport, health care andsavings. Currently, there is no internationally ac-cepted way of calculating or defining a living wage.This criterion therefore rather looks at a standardsintention to pay wages that are enough to pay for adecent standard of living and recognizes thosestandards that use and thereby actively promotethe living wage concept.
